Bird Rescue Volunteers and Volunteer Drivers Needed

This Northern Saw-whet Owl is a lucky survivor of a window collision

One to ten million migratory birds collide with windows in Toronto each year

This global problem is the cause of decline for many bird species - some of which are already threatened with extinction. Collisions with structures are now the leading cause of death to migratory birds.

The Fatal Light Awareness Program (FLAP) and the City of Toronto urgently need your help to rescue these birds. Most of the live birds our volunteers pick up are able to recover and are returned to the wild.

If you are available for a few hours a week -- anytime of day or night -- for bird rescue or to drive birds to a rehabilitation centre throughout the day, please contact us. We would be happy to hear from you.
